
Why Exoplanets need stars...

Don Pollacco*¹

¹University of Warwick – United Kingdom

Abstract

Understanding PLATO stars is vital to our understanding of our planets. This is because we don't actually "see" our planets directly and need to infer properties from measurements of the star. Here we will look at what stellar parameters are needed in the exoplanet analysis and what the expected accuracies/limitations this will leads too.

*Speaker